I recently decided to buy a hands-free kit so that I could make and receive phone calls while driving without taking my hands off the wheel.

After reading some reviews I ordered from Amazon Motorola Roadster 2 Wireless In-Car Speakerphone being one of the highly rated units on sale.

Unfortunately, when it arrived, I discovered that the voice quality of the outgoing calls is disappointing. I listened to a recording made by the person hearing me on the other end of the line and what that person was hearing is pathetic. I've been using this speakerphone for a couple of weeks and this problem is consistent. Check for yourself:

Soon, other problems came up.

- After being automatically updated a week later, the MyMotospeakApp stopped announcing the caller by their name and instead made a loud ring. The first time this happened, I flinched so bad and almost wrecked my car.
- The speakerphone seems to have occasional interference with my car that makes a high-pitch whine that is irritating for a person on the other end.
- On top of that, on unpacking the shipment I found the box had been ripped, the plastic seals removed and the manual missing.
