Some of the most famous pirates were Caribbean buccaneers of the 17th century. The buccaneers began as hunters on the island of Haiti, but throughout the 17th century spread across the Caribbean, preying on Spanish settlements and shipping. Because of their roots as hunters, in many cases their clothing was completely different to that of other pirates. The most famous of all pirates was known as Blackbeard (Edward Teach) who was notorious for tying his beard with red ribbon
