The map below is a population density map of the world. The countries are resized so that the greater the population of that country, the bigger the country looks.

Directions: Use the image of the map below to answer the multiple-choice questions about population densities in the world.

Question 1: According to the map, what are the 3 most densely populated countries in the world? Check all that apply.

    A. India
    B. China
    C. The United States
    D. Nigeria
    E. Brazil
    F. Pakistan

Question 2: How did your predictions from station 2 match up with the results from this station?

Question 3: Deforestation is a word to describe the cutting down of forests to clear the land for another use. Often times, land is cleared so that people will have more room for farming and ranching. What effect do you think an increase in farm land will have on the human population in that area?

Question 4: What effect do you think an increase in farm land will have on the animal and plant population in that area?