How I use technology

Hannah

I don't use my laptop very much at all these days as I can do most of what I want on my mobile phone. If I do use my laptop, all I do on it is send and receive messages from all my mates. I find emailing takes so much longer than texting or other messaging, so I'm not going to use it any more. I'm doing a course at the moment about how to write codes for phone apps. If I work hard, maybe I'll become a famous designer!

Philip

I have a laptop in my bedroom that I use to watch online videos. I like seeing the things my friends make and upload, as well as other things. I buy the songs I really love from the internet too. I get four or five a week so I can have them on my laptop and my mobile phone too. Although I use my phone as much as I did before, I still prefer the computer. I love photography, so often download different software for changing photos.

Gloria

I used my mobile phone so much when I got it, that I've even learned how to design apps. My main interest now is making music, which is easier on a laptop, so I only use my phone once or twice a day, mainly to check my emails. Most people I know have stopped using email, but I still like it. The music software on my computer is great, and my friend makes short films to go with my songs. I put them online and have had some really nice comments.

MY SUMMER CAMP BLOG

by David Stagg aged 12

Instead of spending the long school holidays at home having fun with my friends, I'm spending two weeks at a summer camp with about two hundred other young students doing sports and other activities. I thought I might really miss my parents, and I usually find being with so many people quite hard, but I'm actually having a great time!

I made friends with a boy called Sergio as soon as I arrived. It's a bit strange that he's become my best friend, because we're really different. He loves sports but I really like music. Also, I come from a big family, but he's an only child. We don't even share the same first language as he comes from Spain and I'm English.

Each activity we do is 2½ hours long, so we have time to do four each day, which is about right. I'd rather spend a shorter time on each one, as I'm often a bit bored after two hours. This would give us more free time too. There are plenty of different things to try, though.

The weather was so bad yesterday that we couldn't do the planned activities. Some students started playing chess and other things like that, but I spent the time writing a song on my guitar instead. I played it to Sergio, who liked it. In the evening, we watched a play that some of the students wrote and practised during the day.

If you're thinking of going on a summer camp, my advice is to take plenty of books, puzzles and card games for when you have some free time. And if your parents ask how long you want to stay, choose the longest time that's available because it's so much fun! Finally, I think you ought to leave your laptop at home as you can't use them in camps anyway.

- 1 How did David feel before going away to a summer camp?
☐ A happy that his friends wanted to go with him
☐ B pleased about being with lots of young people
☐ C worried about being away from his mum and dad
- 2 David says that his best friend at the summer camp
☐ A is from another country.
☐ B shares the same interests.
☐ C has many brothers and sisters.
- 3 What does David say about the activities at the summer camp?
☐ A He wanted a bigger variety.
☐ B They spent too long doing each one.
☐ C There were too many to do each day.
- 4 What did David do when the weather was bad?
☐ A acted in a play
☐ B wrote some music
☐ C played board games
- 5 What advice does David give to anyone going to a summer camp?
☐ A You needn't take lots of things to do with you.
☐ B You must make sure that you bring a computer.
☐ C You should try to go for as many weeks as you can.

My school trip

By Molly Fisher

My school organises a trip (0) _____ at _____ least once a term, usually to somewhere (1) _____ as an art gallery, and, although I know that I'm probably learning a lot on these visits, I don't always enjoy them that much, to (2) _____ honest. Last term, though, it was different. The PE teacher arranged a skiing holiday to the mountains in the north of our country, and (3) _____ just for one day but for a whole week!

(4) _____ were about thirty of us in the group and we travelled to the ski resort by bus. The journey took ages, but I didn't mind (5) _____ it was such good fun being on the bus with my friends.

The days passed so quickly, with ski classes every morning, more skiing with our teachers in the afternoon, then activities at our hotel in the evenings. It was a fantastic week – I can't (6) _____ to go again next year!
