The king and his daughter

A Nathualt story (Mexico)

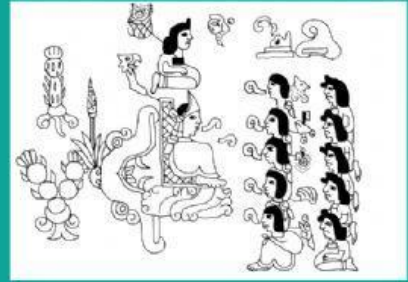

A long time ago, a king's daughter wanted to get married. The king called all the young men in the village. "My daughter will marry the man who can make a miracle", said the king.

After that, a group of men went to the castle. Between all the men, there was a poor man. The king said to him "I will release 100 rabbits and you will have to collect them". The man had a flute. When he played his flute in the mountains, all the rabbits went towards him. However, the king, who was a suspicious man, was not happy. "If you are a brave man, I will lock you up in a house. You will have to eat 2,400 tortillas", he said. Later, the man started to play his flute again. Immediately, 1,000 rats went towards him. The rats ate all the tortillas.

Finally, the next morning, the king was impressed, so the modest intelligent man married the king's daughter.
