

	Statement	True or False
1	the B in ABCD of nutritional assessment stands for biochemical methods.	<input type="text"/>
2	Biochemical methods are also known as laboratory measurements.	<input type="text"/>
3	blood and urine do not indicate the nutrients that are present in someone's body.	<input type="text"/>
4	Biochemical methods of assessing nutritional status are the least accurate.	<input type="text"/>
5	Biochemical methods show exactly how much of a certain nutrient or enzyme is present in the body.	<input type="text"/>
6	Biochemical methods can't spot if someone is deficient in any nutrients by looking at their biochemical markers.	<input type="text"/>
7	Sometimes deficiencies and nutrient-related diseases are spotted before symptoms develop.	<input type="text"/>