CLEANING THE ENVIRONMENT

"Clean up our planet" is an international project to clean up natural spaces. Many schools can participate in the project at any time during the whole year. Here are the stories of four people from different schools and countries:

KIM-LI

Hi, my name is Kim-Li and I am from Vietnam. We did an activity for the project in May, a month ago.

We were 26 students and we cleaned up our local beach because there was a lot of plastic on it. We had to wear special gloves to collect the rubbish and protect our hands. We filled 6 and a half bags.

Visit our school website to see the images from that day.

ROSA

My name is Rosa and I am a primary school teacher in the Dominican Republic.

Last November, my students cleaned up a beach in Puerto Plata, in the north of the country. We spent a full week and we collected more than 100 kilos of rubbish.

The students wrote about this experience in the class blog. They wanted to share it with everyone.

JAMES

My name is James and I work in a secondary school in Manchester that organizes environmental projects with other schools from London and Liverpool.

Each school decides a beach to work on. Students put all the rubbish they collect in large bags and then separate it into three different coloured containers. Finally, lorries collect the containers.

GEORGE

Hi there, I am George and I study at Melbourne University. We will take part in this project from January to March. We are worried about the sea animals because they accidentally eat the plastics we throw away* in the seas and then, they get sick or die.

We collect the rubbish from different public places. Then, we make videos for our website.

GLOSSARY

* throw away: llencem.
 get sick or die: es posen malalts o moren.
