The hardest lesson to learn in sports is how to lose like a true sportsperson, without blaming your defeat on others. Here are some famous moments when losing was just too hard...

In the 1982 German Grand Prix, Nelson Piquet was winning the race. He was trying to pass Eliseo Salazar (who was last in the race), but Salazar didn't let him go past him, so Piquet crashed into Salazar. Piquet jumped out of his car and started trying to hit and kick Salazar (without much success!).

South Korean soccer player Ahn Jung-Hwan scored the goal that sent Italy out of the 2002 World Cup when they beat them 2-1. But Jung-Hwan also played for the Italian soccer team Perugia. After the game, the president of the club, Luciano Gaucci, announced that the player's contract would not be renewed. "That gentleman will never set foot in Perugia again," Gaucci said. "I have no intention of paying a salary to somebody who has ruined Italian soccer." Gaucci later apologized, but Ahn Jung-Hwan left the club and never went back to an Italian club.

In the 2003 Track and Field World Championship, the 100-meter runner Jon Drummond was disqualified for a false start. Drummond lay down on the track and began to cry. Two hours later his coach told reporters, "He's still crying. We're making him drink water because he's becoming dehydrated."

In the 2008 Beijing Olympics, Angel Matos of Cuba was trying to win a bronze medal in taekwon do when the referee disqualified him for a technical error. Matos was furious, and after several minutes of arguing he kicked the referee in the head, and then attacked a Swedish judge. He was immediately banned from all competitions for life.

In 2016, at the Olympics in Rio de Janeiro, the German men's soccer team lost to the host nation in the final. Brazil won their first ever Olympic gold medal in the event and the local fans were delighted. As they celebrated, one very disappointed German player, Robert Bauer, decided to show seven fingers to the fans, to remind them of the time Germany beat Brazil 7-1 in the 2014 World Cup semi-final.
