A day in the life of a teacher

Non is a teacher. She comes from Quang Tri province but now she lives and works in Hanoi, a big city in the north of Vietnam. Today, on the BBC, we ask Non about her life and her job.

Interviewer : How do you start a working day, Non?

Non : Well, I get up at six in the morning. I have breakfast. I often eat bread and I always drink a cup of coffee before I start work. Then I drive my motorbike to the university. It's about 40 minutes from my room.

Interviewer : What do you do at the university?

Non : I prepare my lesson plans and other teaching documents. I usually teach about three to four periods a day.

Interviewer : Then what do you do?

Non : At about 11.20, I have lunch at the canteen. Then I surf the internet until 12.50. I start teach the other periods at 13.00. I leave the university about 15.00.

Interviewer : Do you like your job?

Non : Yes. I really like my job now. I can teach a lot of students. They bring me the positive feeling. I just work from Tuesday to Thursday, so I can go out or listen to music when other people are at work. I also have time staying in bed when everybody works on Monday and Friday. That's great!
