In some countries, an increasing number of people are suffering from health problems as a result of eating too much fast food. It is therefore necessary for governments to impose a higher tax on this kind of food.

To what extent do you agree or disagree with this opinion?

Recently, the increasing presence of fast food has caused many policymakers to consider specific taxation 1 _____ that may fundamentally reduce the consumption of this type of food. However, I contend taxation may not be an effective solution for the following reasons.

Despite the increased prices because of tax, consumers may still 2 _____ fastfood for 3 _____ it brings. In a world with a busy lifestyle, there could be extremely few customers willing to wait for fifteen minutes in their lunch time to be served with a healthy meal. In other words, food quality can sometimes be 4 _____ saving time. Convenience, on the other hand, is perhaps the most significant 5 _____ factor when the majority of the population choose what to eat 6 _____. This is an absolute advantage of fast food, due to 7 _____ value of being 'fast', making it the 8 _____ choice regardless of the health 9 _____ it brings.

From the financial perspective, increased tax on fast food could even be a 10 _____ solution to the problem. This is primarily because fast food is an economical choice for a large number of 11 _____. If such a tax policy is introduced, those who are on a limited food budget will be the ones who will suffer. It will not, therefore, mean that they 12 _____ to healthier food, which still remain relatively more expensive. As a result, a fast food tax alone may only place a financial 13_____ on the average tax-payers.

To conclude, it seems 14_____ to convey the idea that a higher tax on harmful precooked food is an appropriate measure, as it may lead to heavier routine 15_____.
