Miss Queen:	Mr. Rius, what is your opinion about the emergence of artificial intelligence?
Mr. Rius:	I feel it is amazing, yet I feel a little bit scared.
Miss Queen:	I do feel the same. Would you mind telling me why you feel that way?
Mr. Rius:	You know, how fast and precise the AI solves the problems always amazes me. Nevertheless, if it is not used in a good way, perhaps it could bring new problems.
Miss Queen:	Such as?
Mr. Rius:	Plagiarism. Open AI like ChatGPT is able to really help students do their homeworks and projects. It can even make a poem in less than 10 seconds. Can you imagine that? They can easily copy the answers from it!
Miss Queen:	I see exactly what you mean. Plagiarism is unethical. However, we as teachers know which ones are the pure work of the students and which are not, assuming that good teachers understand their students well.
Mr. Rius:	Yeah, you are right. We can always verify and validate their work. However, I'm afraid that if students rely on it heavily, it can impede their creativity as well as critical thinking skill!
Miss Queen:	I couldn't agree more. Nonetheless, we cannot deny this advancement of technology. In my personal point of view, we cannot prohibit the students from using the newest technology like ChatGPT. However, as a teacher, we can make some rules to what extent this usage can be applied by the students.
