Marco Brown is a doctor. He is thirty years old. He works in a very important hospital in New York. Marco is from Texas, but he moved to New York when he was eighteen to study at university. When he was a little child, he liked playing with his cousins. 'I was always a doctor or a nurse,' says Marco. 'My cousins were my patients.'

Marco loves his job. He likes talking to his patients and helping them, but not every day is good. 'I sometimes feel sad at the end of the day. Some patients are ill.' Marco starts work early- he arrives at the hospital at eight o'clock. Then, he has a cup of coffee and sees his first patient. 'I don't always have time to have breakfast or lunch, so I drink a lot of coffee, tea and water. I sometimes eat a sandwich or an apple at midday.' Marc finishes work late- at about seven or eight. Then, he goes to the gym and listens to music. 'The gym is relaxing for me. I'm usually very stressed.' He gets home late, has a quick meal and goes to bed at twelve o' clock.

1. The text is about Marco's life.
2. Marco went to university in Texas.
3. Some days are difficult for Marco at the hospital.
4. Marco has a big breakfast.
5. Marco does exercise in his free time.
