The passage is for questions no. 1-4.

Read the following passage to answer the questions.

Something I could never ever imagined happened to me. It was Thursday night at around 9:30 PM. On that day, I went to my friend's house to do some group work. It was already a bit late, so I decided to go home. Since our houses were pretty close, I decided to walk. Therefore, I had to pay extra attention to my surroundings. It was fine until it wasn't. When I was walking, two men suddenly appeared out of nowhere. They were approaching me. All of a sudden, one of them pulled me hard, and the other just grabbed my bag. Then they pushed me to the bush, took my bag, and ran. I got back up, chased, and screamed my lungs out to ask for help. Fortunately, there were three strangers that heard and saw me. Without much thought, they instantly ran to help me catch the culprits. One of the strangers took big rocks and threw them at those men. Boom! It was bullseye! The robbers fell, and the strangers held them down. I immediately took my bag and looked if anything was already being taken, but thank God my stuff was still in place. After that, we went to the police station to make a report, and we asked the police to handle them.

Because of this accident, I am fully aware that I need to be more careful and prepared. Maybe, I either have to go home early or take public transportation, instead of walking alone at night. Another takeaway is that there are still good people out there that need to be appreciated. I could not thank them enough.
