We've finally arrived in Auckland! It's day one of our tour of New Zealand and we're very excited.

We're going to spend three days here, eating out and relaxing – we've spent a long time travelling to get here so we need to chill out for a bit now, but we also want to see all the sights. While we're here we're going to go up the Sky Tower – apparently there are great views from the top!

Yesterday we visited Rotorua. It's the strangest place I've ever been to! There are geysers here – geysers are natural springs of very hot water – and you can sit in natural hot pools.

It was relaxing, but it was also a bit smelly – the water had a smell like bad eggs! We also went to a Maori village to see how the ancient Maori people lived. They had special ways of hunting for food and building houses.

Amazing! I've always wanted to see a kiwi bird and today we saw one at the Rainbow Springs Zoo! New Zealand hasn't got any dangerous animals like tigers and lions, but the kiwi bird is very cute. It lives in the forest. It can't fly because it has got very small wings; and it's got whiskers, like a cat. Very weird! I've taken some photos of the kiwi and I'll post them online later.

Tomorrow we're going to Napier. It's a special city because most of the buildings are modern – from the 1930s. There aren't many old buildings anymore because there was a big earthquake in 1931 and most buildings didn't survive. We want to see as many things as possible so we're going to take a tour bus around the city. Jill wants to hire bikes and cycle around the city, but my legs are tired! We've done a lot of walking this week! I think we need some rest because next week we're going to a ski resort in the mountains on South Island. Jill wants to go hiking and I want to go skiing!
