<sup>3</sup> . She had no idea what this was, so she looked it up. She then found out that The Ashes is a cricket competition between England and Australia, which takes place every year.

<sup>4</sup> . In the end, she decided to send a simple tweet, which said that she wasn't a cricket match. Her message became an internet hit and made her famous. <sup>5</sup> . She had a great time there and loved watching the match.

<sup>6</sup> . She has now become a cricket fan herself and thinks many more Americans will play cricket in the future.

a) In fact, she became so famous that the Australian airline, Qantas, gave her a free flight to Sydney, Australia to see The Ashes.

b) As they were not cricket fans, Ashley and her boyfriend had no idea what her Twitter name meant.

- c) Gradually Ashley's online following grew and she received hundreds of tweets from cricket fans.
- d) ~~These days, it is possible to become famous for something as simple as your online name.~~
- e) She enjoyed it so much that after the competition she decided to learn more about the game.
- f) Something she noticed was that many of the messages were about an event called 'The Ashes'.
