

Use the relative pronoun who to join sentences. Rewrite the sentence.

1. Elisa is my aunt. My aunt got married to an Egyptian.
2. He is my cousin. He studies medicine.
3. That is my cousin. My cousin moved to Australia.
4. That is my cousin. She takes care of my grandma.

Use the relative pronoun which to join sentences.

1. I like my surname. My surname is difficult to pronounce.
2. I want to learn the family recipe. The family recipe is of Nahuatl origin.
3. I always remember the same memory. The memory is about my last family vacation.
4. This is jewelry. This jewelry was used by my great-grandmother.

Use the relative pronoun whose to join sentences.

1. This is my cousin. My cousin's sister was born yesterday.
2. I like my aunt. My aunt's husband is Egyptian.
3. Last holiday I shared a room with my grandfather. My grandfather's stories are amazing.
4. Emma is one of the three British people in the school. Her ancestors came from the West Germanic tribes.
5. I talk a lot with my cousin. Her house is too far from mine.
6. I enjoy spending time with my cousins. Their father taught us to swim.