The Kiwi bird lives only in New Zealand. Although most of the birds live in the forests, some kiwis live in grasslands. Because the kiwi is a nocturnal bird, few people in New Zealand have seen their national bird in the wild. The flightless bird can grow to about the size of a chicken. Female kiwis are usually larger than male kiwis.

Kiwis have no tail and their wings are useless. They can survive because of their sharp feet. They use their feet to kick an enemy. Kiwis eat worms, insects, leaves, berries and seeds. From winter to summer, kiwis put their nests under tree roots and in holes made by the male. Each nest contains one or two eggs. The eggs are smooth, and greenish-white in color. Kiwi eggs are usually larger than the eggs of any other birds.

There are three kinds of kiwis in New Zealand. They are Brown Kiwis, the Little Spotted Kiwis and the Great Spotted Kiwis. Kiwis may be strong but the number of the birds today has decreased. The government of New Zealand must save them.

66. Where does the Kiwi bird live?

Dear Sam,

I have new friends, Tom and Evan. They are my neighbors. Tom was born on February 15, 1995. As an Aquarius, Tom is friendly. He has a lot of friends but he seldom has a close friend. Although sometimes he likes to be alone, he is everybody's friend. Nobody should disturb him when he wants to be alone. Many of his friends usually come to him for advice. He usually comes up with good advice because an Aquarius is a genius. However, he is so eccentric and I sometimes find it very difficult to understand him.

Evan is younger than Tom. He was born on September 24, 1998 and his zodiac sign is Libra. Like any other Libras, Evan is tolerant of other people and very dependable in everything he does. He is very honest and intelligent. He likes reading and keeps many books in his room. People under this Zodiac sign usually love art. Evan enjoys watching concerts and he loves listening to soft music. He also likes writing poems and watching plays at the theater.
