ENGLISH LESSONS FOR EVERYONE

People study English all over the world. They need English for work and to find information. But in many countries, people don't know English very well. In Bangladesh, for example, many people can't learn the language because they haven't got money for lessons. Now, for people in Bangladesh, there is a solution to this problem. They can learn English on their mobile phones!

Bangladesh is the first country in the world to use mobile phones for learning English. Over 50 million people in the country have got mobile phones. They usually use their phones to chat with friends or send text messages. Now, they can learn English with Janala, the English language programme. Janala means "window". This is a perfect name for these lessons because they open a window to the world. In the first three months, Janala gave more than one million English lessons. The lessons are very popular in Bangladesh now. The mobile phone companies are giving special low prices, so the lessons don't cost much money. Also, with Janala, people can study anywhere – in the street, in shops, on the bus or at home.
