Grammar Practice

Present Perfect Simple & Present Perfect Progressive

Present Perfect Simple

The present perfect (have/has + past participle) is used when a past action has a connection with the present.

I've lost my keys. I can't find them anywhere.

A: Why are you so happy? B: I've won the lottery.

Present Perfect Progressive

Use the present perfect progressive (have/has been + present participle) to say how long something has been happening or for actions that have been happening repeatedly and continue into the present time.

The baseball game has been going on for four hours!

Tom has been collecting baseball caps since he was a kid.

Present Perfect Progressive vs. Present Perfect Simple

You can use the present perfect progressive to express the length of time an action has been happening, and the present perfect simple to say what has happened during that period.

The band has been playing for an hour. They've played fifteen songs.
(During the period that the band has been playing, they have played fifteen songs.)

The present perfect simple also suggests that the action is completed.
I've been knitting a sweater. (not finished) I've knitted a sweater. (finished)

Note: Some verbs do not take the progressive form. So use the present perfect simple.
How long have you known your boyfriend? (NOT have you been knowing)

Present perfect continuous
Emphasis on ACTIVITY

He has been repairing the car for 2 hours

Present perfect
Emphasis on RESULT

He has repaired the car
