

ESTILOS DE GAUDI

Guell park

Located in the district of Gracia, Park Güell is a public park built between 1900 and 1914 by order of the businessman Eusebi Güell and designed by Gaudí. It was inaugurated as a park in 1926, although it had been designed to become an urbanization.

Milà House

In Barcelona, we find Casa Milà, popularly known as La Pedrera. Its aesthetic is especially inspired by the organic forms of nature and it was built between 1906 and 1910

Batló House

Casa Batlló is a remodeling of an old building by the architect Emilio Sala Cortés. His style starts from baroque style, and completely moves away from rigid and classical forms.

Güell Palace

this palace was designed by Gaudí although commissioned by Eusebi Güell. This palace was the first great commission to the architect, and he came to devise up to 25 possible facades for the palace.

Miralles Portal

the Portal Miralles is the access door to Casa Miralles. It is made with a large lobed arch and ornamented with a wrought iron cross, and has a canopy for the rain and an iron gate. In addition to a sculpture by Gaudi that was inaugurated in 2002 with the remodeling of the portal.

Vicens House

Built between 1883 and 1888. It was Gaudí's first work after graduating as an architect. Despite its Modernist style, it belongs to its orientalist stage, with great influence from Asian and Hispanic Islamic art, such as Mudejar and Nasrid. In 2005 it was declared a World Heritage Site
