

humanitarian efforts    molten lava    shelter    foundations    agriculture    hurricanes

Natural disasters are often destructive claiming people's lives, destroying their homes and restricting access to food, water, 1) [redacted], employment and education. Extreme weather can cause disasters. Floods can wipe out roads and damage homes and 2) [redacted] ruin property. Blizzards can be hazardous to the functioning of infrastructure. Powerful earthquakes shatter the 3) [redacted] of even the largest buildings. Volcanoes erupt and release 4) [redacted] or gas and ash. Uncontrollable wildfires often leave nothing behind in their path. Severe heat causes droughts and hinders 5) [redacted]. Mudslides and landslides seriously damage property. Tornadoes pick up, destroy, and scatter anything in their paths. Tsunamis can wipe out a whole city. Unfortunately, despite huge 6) [redacted] it often takes a very long time for communities to recover from such disasters.

