

Read my dad's story! by Josh

'In 1990 I was a young boy. It was an autumn day in town. I was walking down the High Street with my mum when I stopped because I wanted to look in a shop window. I was feeling very excited because I saw something very special in the shop.

That special thing was a new games console. But it wasn't just a normal games console. It was the first portable games console.

That day was my birthday. I had some money to spend and I was looking for a present to buy when I saw that games console. I bought it and I was really happy. The games console had four buttons on it, it took headphones and it also had a battery pack that you plugged in. There weren't a lot of games at first - in fact, I had only two. I loved computer games, so I played a lot! And now my dad has games before they sell them in the shops. Amazing!

So, he still loves computer games and he plays a lot.

What year was it? It was 1990.

Where was the young boy walking? _____

Why did he stop? _____

What day was it? _____

Were there a lot of games for the console? _____

4) These sentences are wrong. Read the text again and correct them.

It was winter. It was autumn. _____

The boy was excited about an old games console in the shop. _____

The games console had five buttons. _____

Josh's dad had three games. _____