My story has.....one of legend. But all must And here mine, this legend theyof. It has to this. This final stand, this final battle, this last chapter.

Read the following text and answer:

1-What did he do yesterday?

2-What does he remember?

3-Where is he today?

4-How do you think he feels?

Yesterday, I rode through the misty fields, my sword at my side, a constant companion. A memory came to me as I was watching the horizon, reminding me of battles fought and victories won. My mind stays on the past, a time when swords clashed, and warriors met their fate on blood-soaked soil.

Today, I find myself in a quiet village, surrounded by people tending to their crops. The air is filled with the scent of burning wood, a comforting aroma that takes me back to the halls of Bebbanburg. As the flames dance, I remember the warmth of the hearth and the laughter of companions.

The future, however uncertain, calls me. I feel a storm coming, and the gods whisper of challenges yet to come. Tonight, under the vast expanse of the heavens, I will sit by the fire, contemplating what comes next. Battles await, and destiny, like the North Star, guides me.

In the shadows of twilight, I think on a life made by sword and shield. The saga continues, and I, Uhtred of Bebbanburg, stay a warrior of the land, bound by duty and the call of destiny.
