Ronan

I work in a fairly traditional office environment doing a typical nine-to-five job. I like my job, but it's annoying that my commute to work takes an hour and a half each way and most of my work could really be done online from home. But my boss doesn't seem to trust that we will get any work done if left to our own devices, and everyone in the company has to clock in and out every day. It's frustrating that they feel the need to monitor what we do so closely instead of judging us based on our task performance, like most companies do these days.

Jo

I used to do a typical five-day week, but after I came out of my parental leave, I decided that I wanted to spend more time with my children before they start school. After negotiating with my boss, we decided to cut my working week down to a three-day work week. This of course meant a significant cut in my pay too, as I'm paid on a pro-rata basis. I've since noticed, though, that my workload hasn't decreased in the slightest! I'm now doing five days' worth of work in three days, but getting paid much less for it! I find myself having to take work home just so that I can meet the deadlines. It's wearing me out trying to juggle work with looking after my children and my family, but I don't dare to bring this up with my boss because I think he feels as if he's made a huge concession letting me come in only three days a week.

1. Ronan's boss thinks his employees will not be as productive if they work from home. True False

2. Ronan thinks that the performance of employees should be judged according to how much time they spend in the office. True False

3. Jo is paid the same for a five-day work week as she is on a three-day work week. True False

4. Jo feels exhausted trying to manage both a five-day workload and childcare. True False

III) LISTENING

Look at the notes about negotiations. Some information is missing. You will hear part of a talk given by a business executive. For each question (1 - 7) fill in the numbered space using one or two words. You will hear the talk twice.

Avoid thinking that a negotiation is the same as a _____¹. You will get a bad reputation and you won't be able to stay _____² long-term.

Before the negotiation, make sure you prepare. Think about the following points:

1. What could the _____³ result of the negotiation be for you? It's unlikely you will get this, but you need to know what it is to get close to it.
2. When do you need to _____⁴ from the negotiations? Knowing what you can't accept is just as important as knowing what you can.
3. What are you prepared to give the other side to be able to secure your _____⁵?

Try being clear about your goals for the negotiation at the beginning to help build a trusting relationship. If you're both honest, you can more easily advance towards a _____⁶. Finally, learn about the other person and what they want and need. You'll both be more productive if you're trying to help each other rather than trying to _____⁷ each other.
