This is Hercules. He is a hero who features prominently in ancient Roman and Greek mythology. Originally known as Heracles in ancient Greece, Hercules was famous for fighting monsters and helping people. In both Greek and Roman mythology, Hercules is the son of a god and a mortal princess called Alcmeme. Hercules traveled through time and now he wants to visit us and see how the world is nowadays.

Could you write him an email telling about you? Include your age, where you are from, what you do, favourite activities and what you would invite him to do in your country.

2) Hercules found this article really interesting! Read the following passage and answer the questions below.

Amazing Swimming Challenge

Ross Edgley is an athlete and adventurer. He has taken part in the 'World's Strongest Marathon'. This is not like an ordinary marathon, in which people just run. Instead, they pull a car behind them while they're running. In 2017, Ross decided to swim around the coast of Britain. If he was successful, he would be the first person to do this, but this wasn't why he did it. He wanted to encourage people to be more active. He needed to practise swimming long distances. He wanted to swim across the English Channel because a swimming pool wouldn't be similar enough to his challenge. Unfortunately there was a two-year waiting list for Channel swimming, so he practised in a huge lake instead.

Ross was worried about jellyfish stinging him in the sea, so, before he started his swim, he grew a long beard to protect his face. A wetsuit protected his body from stings. Ross hoped to swim at least six hours a day, but most days he managed ten hours in the water. He spent the rest of the time on a boat, where he slept and ate most of his meals. While Ross was in the water, he was also given protein drinks and small amounts of high-energy food. One day, Ross couldn't swim because of a bad storm. Luckily, it was his birthday so he spent the time opening presents and relaxing.

In 2013, another swimmer took 100 days to swim down just one side of Britain. Ross hoped to complete his round-Britain challenge in 135 days. In the end it took him 157 days because of strong winds and high waves, but he is the first person to ever swim around Britain.
