I. Read the following text and write a subtopic title for each paragraph. Then, answer the questions below (9 points).

_____ (1 point)

Behavioral addictions or non-substance addictions, like gambling addiction, are a set of behaviors that a person becomes dependent on and craves. While no one doubts the existence of physical addictions to different substances, behavioral addictions are still hotly debated and outright disregarded by many doctors, institutions, and everyday people.

_____ (1 point)

When someone abuses a substance, be it prescription or illicit, their body can grow dependent on the substance to function. After a period of time, this dependence could evolve into cravings for the drug and, eventually, they could become erratic without it.

_____ (1 point)

Certain substances, like opioids and benzodiazepines, are more addictive than others. This is because of the physical reactions they have in the body. There is indisputable, biological evidence of what these kinds of drugs do to peoples' bodies in the long-term. However, non-substance related addictions are another story.

_____ (1 point)

While there is debate on how society should treat people suffering from addiction, there is no doubt that physical addiction is a thing experienced by thousands of Americans. Behavioral addictions, however, are another thing entirely.

Also known as non-substance addictions or addictive behaviors, there are certain actions out there that people have found to be addictive. These can include: Gambling, Videogames, Internet, Nomophobia, Anorexia, Bulimia, etc.
