JI love fashion and I follow all the latest trends. But there's one trend that I'm not sure about: wearing socks with high heels.

This is a trend that started a few years ago, but it's become really popular in the last year or so. Now you see it everywhere - on the streets, in magazines, in shops.

I think one of the reasons why this trend has become so popular is because celebrities like Rihanna and Gwyneth Paltrow have been seen wearing it. But just because a celebrity wears something doesn't mean it looks good!

For me, the problem with this trend is that it looks really uncomfortable. The whole point of sandals or high heels is that they're cool and light for summer. Wearing socks with them makes your feet look hot and sweaty! Also, when you wear socks with shoes, your legs look shorter, and who wants that?

I think there are some people who can pull off this trend, but not many. For example, I saw a girl on the bus wearing white ankle socks with black high heels and she looked great. But I tried to copy her and it was a disaster! I looked like my granny!

The other problem with this trend is that it only works with certain kinds of shoes. You can't wear socks with open-toed shoes, obviously, and it doesn't look good with boots either. So if you like this trend, you need to have a big collection of high-heeled shoes!

In general, I think it's much easier to get fashion wrong than to get it right. And this trend is a perfect example of that.
