Hello,

I just purchased a subscription to your concert hall after having wonderful experience at a recent show. Now I'm trying to purchase tickets for an upcoming performance that isn't included in my subscription. However, when I enter my subscriber number in the box provided in order to get my 10% discount, I see red text saying "Invalid subscriber number", and the discount isn't applied. I'm certain I'm using the right number. Could you look into this and get back to me? Thank you.

Sincerely,

Wayne Judge

Charleston Central Museum Claims Prestigious Honor

by Jill Bradford

MERRITT (April 20)—Charleston Central Museum was awarded the Scientific Literature Award at the first-ever Midwestern Arts & Science Awards ceremony on April 18. Put on by the Midwestern Knowledge Foundation, the event took place at Washington Convention Hall in front of an audience of around 6,000 members of the arts and science communities.

Charleston Central Museum won the prize for the detailed and entertaining information pack that supplements its exhibition "The Invisible World: Microorganisms." Lead designer Yui Takahashi accepted the award and thanked graphic designer Raymond Schlupp, who provided many of the pack's illustrations. She also promised that the pack would be publically available on the new version of the museum's Web site, which is currently under construction.

"The Invisible World: Microorganisms" was conceptualized by scientist Thomas Ellson, who enlisted the knowledge and expertise of architect Fiona Watson to construct the exhibits. The exhibition has been a tremendous success for the museum, with ticket sales topping those of all previous exhibitions. After its run there comes to an end, it will be transported to neighboring Georgetown to be displayed at Georgetown Science Institute for approximately two months.

Dear Ms. Bradford,

I was initially happy to see your recent coverage of Charleston Central Museum's success at the Midwestern Art & Science Awards. However, as I read through the article, excitedly waiting to see my name in print, I found that my work had been mistakenly attributed to Fiona Watson, who merely served as an advisor to me during the process. This was very disappointing. I encourage you to carry out more thorough research for future articles.

Sincerely,

Kevin Shaw

Hi all,

Thanks for agreeing to represent Lynne's Tacos at the Global Crafts Festival this weekend. In addition to following the instructions on the attached schedule, please note that there will be a city-issued food safety checklist that the early shift workers must fill out, and that the late shift workers on Friday and Saturday must carefully store the food and lock up our booth. The actual food sale period will start a half hour later and end a half hour earlier than the shifts, so we should have plenty of time for these tasks.

If we start to run low on supplies before the dinner rush, if the gas grill stops working (which has happened before), or if another problem comes up, please contact me or Grady, who will be managing the restaurant all weekend.

Thanks,
Lynne
