2. Listen and Read.

The Intiñan Museum is located three minutes from the Mitad del Mundo monument in Quito.

It is popular with national and international tourists because it is close to the equatorial line. It is a fun place for kids because it offers different activities to learn and understand more about the equatorial line. For example, children and adults walk along the equatorial line with their eyes closed to practice stability. Finally, visitors try to balance an egg on the head of a nail because there is more equilibrium in the middle of the world. People who do this without breaking the egg get a certificate!

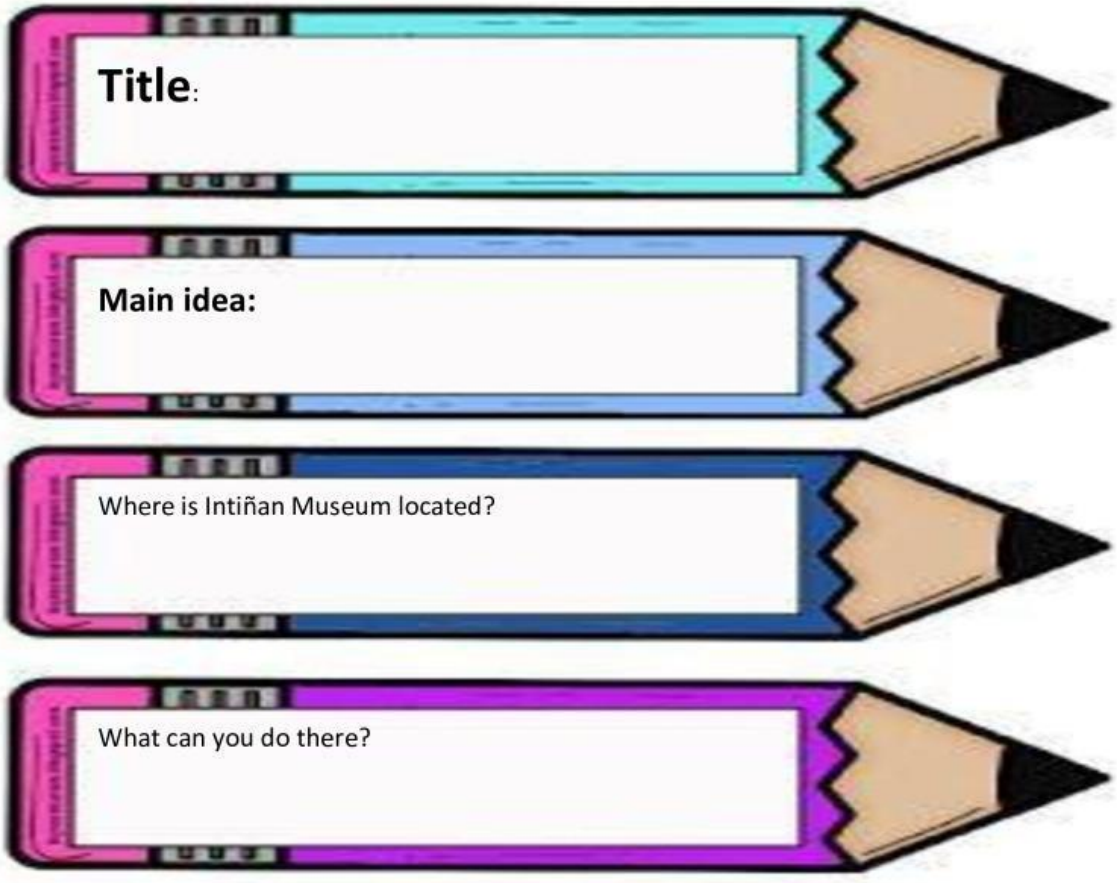

This museum has interesting things to do and see, and all members of the family can have a great time and learn more about our amazing country.
