"It's finally lunchtime!" I said with joy. As I looked around the room I thought how different the world is now—only a few humans and all robots. I can't believe our life has come to this. I miss being at school eating with everyone or enjoying a night out at dinner. I don't know how I feel about living forever. Maybe I should have not had the shot, because I am starting to feel miserable. Every day is the same as the other and I am very sick of it. I am ready for a change, a solution, to somehow fix this cruel world.

This reminds me of what our future will look like. Robots work with real people and they are more robots than people. With the technology that we have today, this scares me because it is a realistic representation of what I think our lives will look like. I think that it is going to ruin our world and everything is going to turn into technology and not real life. Everything will be fake. I am already upset that we rely on so much technology and I do not like the world we live in today. I know it will only get worse.
