

Verbs: being and having

1 Tick the correct sentence in each pair.

- 1 a Of course, there are some students being more willing to study than others.
b Of course, there are some students who are more willing to study than others.
- 2 a In the West, we are used to having clean water which comes out of the tap.
b In the West, we are used to have clean water which comes out of the tap.

The verbs be and have are not usually used in continuous forms (being and having) when they are a main verb with their basic meaning – be = to exist, have = to possess:

These people are among the most disadvantaged in society. (not ~~are being~~)

They have a loving family to look after them. (not ~~are having~~)

They are sometimes used as a main verb with a different meaning in a continuous form to emphasise a temporary state or action:

She's having a shower at the moment – can she call you back? (= showering)

We're having a great time here in New York. (= enjoying our visit)

My boss is being awkward about giving me time off. (= behaving in an awkward way)

★ Being + adjective is only used with adjectives which describe an attitude or behaviour (honest, patient, etc.), not those describing feelings (happy, sad, etc.).

Continuous forms can also be used after certain words and phrases, including: be used to, enjoy, like, look forward to, be advantages to, be worth, a reason for, rather than, without

I'm not used to being away from my family. (= not accustomed to it)

There are advantages to having a flat in the city centre.

2 Correct the mistake below.

I'm really looking forward

3 Complete the sentences with the correct form of be or have.

- 1 Japan has a large number of people who 65 or over.
- 2 He enjoys the centre of attention.
- 3 People of my grandmother's generation traditional values.
- 4 There are sometimes disadvantages to a vegetarian.
- 5 When I left the house, he his breakfast.
- 6 Each cottage its own kitchen facilities.
- 7 I don't know how to tell her without rude.
- 8 I think he's looking forward to some time off work.