A Very Fruity Idea

Our cities are filled with trees, and the vast majority of those trees produce edible fruits. — [1] —. But with no one to collect and process them, most simply fall to the ground and rot, wasting a potentially excellent source of nutrition.

One new organization wants to change that. — [2] —. Fresh From The Tree is a non-profit group that aims to collect as much fruit as possible from the city's trees, and then make it into delicious snacks that can be sold at low prices to local residents.

"We have been doing a survey of the locations of all the fruit trees in town," says co-founder Michaela Anderson. "Once we have identified a promising tree, we contact the homeowners and ask if we can pick the fruit for them. — [3] —. They usually don't have time to manage it themselves."

After the volunteers collect the fruit, they give half of it to the owners of the residence, and keep the other half to turn into fruit pies, jams, sorbets, and other tasty but healthy desserts. The group only has a handful of volunteers at the moment but are hoping to recruit more in the coming months. — [4] —. They are also negotiating with the city to collect fruit from trees on government property.

Questions 172-175 refer to the following online chat.

Cheryl Stone

[3:48] I just got a message from Mr. Baker saying that his flight has been delayed until 9 P.M. Weather conditions are terrible there in Chicago.

Allan Franklin

[3:50] Really? But he's supposed to make a presentation to the executives from Harper Telecom today!

Maurice Wood

[3:51] I've got all the visuals ready. But it would be problematic if we don't have a speaker.

Allan Franklin

[3:52] That's an understatement. We need this contract. Otherwise, we may not meet our sales target for the year.

Cheryl Stone

[3:54] Can't we do the presentation ourselves?

Allan Franklin

[3:55] I'm not sure. There are several firms competing for the contract we are trying to get. Harper Telecom could decide to give the contract to someone else if they aren't impressed with our presentation.

Cheryl Stone

[3:57] I think I could do the speaking, but without Mr. Baker's technical background and expertise, our proposal might not sound very convincing. What do you think?

Allan Franklin

[3:58] I agree with you. I think it would be better to call Harper Telecom and try to convince them to listen to his pitch tomorrow morning. That might be our best option.

Cheryl Stone

[3:59] I'm on it. I'll let you know how it goes.

Dear Mr. Davis,

I am sending this letter as an expression of my gratitude for the excellent work your contracting company did on the Marigold Street construction work. You and your 10 crew members were a pleasure to work with and were always timely, professional, and knowledgeable.

Already, there have been a lot of positive reactions about the work you've done from residents and business owners in the vicinity. There have been many positive remarks about the beautiful brick sidewalks that were installed.

This was now the fifth time for us to hire your company and I am delighted that your business and the City of Griggston have continued our ongoing partnership. I have wired the payment for your contracted services to your company's bank account as per our regular agreement.

Also, I would like to let you know that my office is working on a similar project for Rosedale Avenue. Nothing is confirmed as of yet, but I should have more details in a few weeks. I would also like to consider your company for this task. It would take approximately the same amount of time as the work on Marigold Street did and would possibly begin at the end of April. Let me know if you might be interested.

Thank you again, and we look forward to working with you in the future.

Sincerely,

Lois Oliveira
Senior city planner

Dear Mr. Carlson,

Thank you for coming by my home this afternoon to check out my kitchen. I appreciate the information you provided as it confirmed what your brochure said.

I have discussed the materials you suggested with my husband. Both of the recommendations are attractive, but after talking about it, we have agreed that we should go ahead with the marble option for our countertops. Please send us the total cost estimate for the project when you have time.
