

Unit 9 Reading

You and Your Health

Teenagers are not usually worried about their health. They think that health problems only affect older people.

However, that is not true. Scientists have found that the risk of heart disease starts very early in life. If you start exercising when you are young, you can reduce the risk of illness throughout your life. Here are some tips:

Keeping in Shape	Intensity (how hard)	Time (how long)
Frequency (how often)	You should try to increase the number of times you repeat an exercise, and build resistance.	You should exercise at least 15-30 minutes at one time. You should do enough exercise to burn extra calories.
You should exercise at least three times a week. A person who exercises only once a week will not improve fitness.

Stress

Stress is another problem that affects teenagers. Young people nowadays face fast changes and difficult situations constantly. They often need to deal with problems in school and at home and with starting or ending personal relationships.

Here are some suggestions on how to deal with stress.

1. Work it off: You should have a regular exercise program. It provides both physical and mental benefits.
2. Play: Recreation helps to relieve stress. You should spend 20 minutes every day walking, reading a magazine, or just hanging out. Just enjoy yourself!
3. Eat well and sleep well: Poor nutrition and lack of sleep can lead to feelings of exhaustion and stress.
