Underwater Treasure

Have you ever dreamed of finding hidden treasure? Imagine finding 300-year-old gold coins and other valuable things at the bottom of the sea.

That is what happened in 2015 to Eric Schmitt. Eric was a boat captain. He and his family had a contract with 1715 Fleet-Queens Jewels, a Florida company that has permission to look for treasure in the area. Eric and his family usually didn't find anything, but on June 17 when Eric was moving sand with his hands, he was thrilled to see gold coins appearing between his fingers. At the time, Eric was only 1,000 feet from the coast and the coins were just 15 feet below the water. In total, Eric and his family found 52 gold coins, 40 feet of gold chain, and 110 silver coins and buttons – a magnificent collection worth over $1 million. One gold coin, called a Tricentennial Royal, was made for the Spanish king and was worth $500,000! Eric and his family had started looking for treasure in 2010, but this was the biggest collection they had ever found.

Why was the treasure there? In 1715, a group of twelve boats were returning to Spain from Havana, Cuba. They sailed into bad weather as they were passing the Florida coast. Eleven of the ships, including the main ship, the Capitana, were damaged and sank. The gold and silver they were carrying sank with them.

Since the discovery, Eric and his team continue to work in the area, hoping to find more of the Capitana's gold. They have found more silver coins and some buttons but nothing compared to the first treasure they found.
