THE CHURCH BELL OF ATRI

A long time ago, in the village of Atri, there was an excellent mayor. He lived in the Town Hall, next door to the church. This mayor cared about the villagers. If anyone was in trouble, they would come to see him and he would sort it out. Sometimes however, he was out. So, one day, he set up a new system. He announced that, if anyone was in trouble, or if anyone was the victim of a crime – there were no police in those days – they should ring the church bell. The system worked very well. If anyone rang the bell, all the villagers would come running, as well as the mayor himself. They would listen to the complaint and sort it out together. There was a young man in the village, who fancied himself as a dashing knight. One day, he decided that his horse was too old for his flashy image. He set the horse loose to look after itself and he bought a young horse, a huge beautiful white stallion. He pranced around the village in blue and red silk clothes on his magnificent steed, trying to attract the attention of the young ladies and make all the other young men jealous.

The old horse roamed around the village, eating what grass there was, but when winter came, there was none and there was no-one to give it any hay. It wandered into the town centre and into the church. The bell rope had worn thin and it looked like straw to the horse. It gave a tug and began to nibble it. The church bell rang out loud and clear. Of course, everyone came running. They felt sorry for the poor skinny horse. The mayor decided that the horse had been wronged and was in need of support. He ordered the young man to take it back and look after it properly. All the villagers made sure he carried out the instruction.

B. Read the following text about the paranormal, choose the correct answer.

A PARANORMAL EXPERIENCE?

Ghosts, haunted houses, the spirit world and communication with the dead have fascinated humans since the beginning of their existence. Most people, whether believers or sceptics like myself, find paranormal experiences captivating; you could go on and on listening to these kinds of stories. But the debate lies on whether the allegedly paranormal events that witnesses claim to have experienced are real. I don't doubt that many people really believe that what they have experienced is a paranormal event –real is what you believe to be real, after all.

I myself experienced an event that might be considered paranormal by some. A long time ago, my cousin died unexpectedly, and her husband, a great ghost sceptic, couldn't find my cousin's life insurance policy. One night, my cousin appeared in my dreams. "You smell terrible," I told her. "Of course, I smell bad. I'm dead," she said. "Anyway, I'm here to tell you where is the document that my husband is looking for." And she told me. The following day, I told my cousin's husband that I might know where the policy was – I didn't tell him how I knew because that would have prevented him from looking for it. We went to his home, and the document was precisely where my dead cousin had told me it would be. Paranormal?

No doubt it's very tempting to believe that I actually talked to my dead cousin and that I have some kind of psychic abilities. That would mean that when we die, we go somewhere in the form of a spirit, which is a nice thing to think because that means that our soul never dies. But maybe I already knew where that document was from one of my numerous visits to my cousin's home, and my mind just reminded me of where it was through one of my daily dreams. That's more likely, and it's what I am inclined to think happened.

The truth is that there has been so much fraud in the history of the paranormal that it's difficult to give any validity to the high number of paranormal claims that populate the Internet and the different media. Actually, fraud played a key role in the very foundation of spiritualism, a religious movement based on the belief that the spirits of the dead exist and have both the ability and the inclination to communicate with the living.

The first mediums known in recent history, the Fox sisters, convinced a good part of the American and European society of the 19th century that they could talk with the spirits.

They made lots of public demonstrations held before paying audiences, which gave birth to spiritualism and attracted many imitators who also claimed to be able to communicate with spirits. But surprisingly, in 1888, Margaret Fox confessed that her abilities were just a fabrication and showed which tricks she had been using to pretend to be talking to the spirits.

Now, can I really talk with the dead? Well, if you put enough money on the table, I might say 'yes' and even show you how I do it.
