Cyberbullying can have a significant impact on a child or teen's emotional and psychological well-being. Someone who is a victim of online bullying may experience feelings of depression, stress and anxiety, loneliness, and may have great difficulty sleeping.

There are many reasons why kids and teens become cyber bullies. Usually however, cyber bullies have some sort of insecurity. To protect their egos and feel superior, they make others feel bad about themselves.

It can affect their academic performance, and may result in poor or unhealthy eating habits, social withdrawal from others, poor concentration, low self-esteem, feelings of worthlessness, and even thoughts of suicide.

In summary, online bullying can be devastating for a child or teen and can make his or her life absolutely unbearable.

Some cyber bullies see it as a means to gain popularity and others do it to feel powerful or escape their own problems. At times, cyber bullies themselves may be bullying victims so they "prey" on other people to feel better about themselves.

Cyberbullying is an aggressive and intentionally hurtful or intimidating behavior directed towards someone else.
