READING Read this article and do tasks A and B

There are many prejudices and different people have strong feelings towards different people or things. One example of this is people's attitude towards eating insects.

A new United Nations report says that we should all eat insects. A. ____ It is called "Edible Insects: Future Prospects for Food and Feed Security". The U.N. says it is important that we eat insects to help the Earth. It gave three reasons why we should be adding insects to our diet. B. ____ 'Insects are healthy, nutritious alternatives to everyday food such as chicken, pork, beef and even fish.' The second reason is they are better for the environment than breeding cows, sheep, and other animals. Finally, 'insect farming' would help millions of poor families around the world eat and start a small business.

Many cultures already include insects in their diet. The report says: 'Many people around the world eat insects out of choice, largely because of the tastiness. C. ____ However, most people in Western or 'developed' countries think the idea of eating insects is disgusting. The report says governments need to educate Westerners about the benefits of eating bugs so they get over the 'disgust factor'. D. ____ It told the 'New Scientist' magazine: 'On paper, insects are fantastic, but on a plate, most people won't touch them.'
