When Kimberly came home, her mother said, "I have something for you."

"Wow! What is it?" Kimberly asked excitedly.

Mom drew a pair of new red shoes from behind her back.

"They are beautiful!" said Kimberly. "Thanks, Mom!" Kimberly had wanted new shoes to go with the new dress her grandma had given her for her upcoming violin recital.

Kimberly sat down at the kitchen table to try on the new shoes. She pushed her right foot slowly into the shoe. "Ouch!" she exclaimed. "That pinches. These shoes are too tight."

"That's not possible," Mom said. "They are the same size as your other shoes. Let me have a look."

Mom inspected the new shoes. "You're right, Kimberly. These don't fit well."

"Can we go to the mall right now to get bigger ones?" Kimberly asked.

"Not now, Kimberly. I have to make dinner. We can go tomorrow after school, okay?"

"Okay, I can wait."

"Silly me," said Mom, "buying you shoes without having you try them on first!"

"Don't worry," said Kimberly. "Tomorrow we can exchange them for the right size, and I can use them next week at my violin recital. I'm so thrilled."
