Best Answer:  OK,

In polite society, you always refer to rank before using first names.

So everyone your elder would be Mr or Mrs. If they hold a rank separate from this (Doctor, Professor, Officer, Judge, Senator, Representative, President, Chancellor, etc) then that rank would be substituted.

In a pinch, Sir or Madam is acceptable in all circumstances. They are undefined greetings of respect.

Anyone of similar age or younger, you can refer to them by name or at least ask if you may address them familiarly.

You may not ask this of a superior. They have to offer it.

"Hello sir."

"Please, call me Frank."

Sounds like this Doctor in question is a real witch. A more appropriate response would be "Please address me as Dr. so and so." or "Kindly refer to my title please."

Rudeness is an indication of weakness. And those who are rude typically pay for it in the end.

Good Luck!
