My Month of Holidays

What a strange month it was, but it was awesome, too!
Why? I recently discovered that there are many types of unusual holidays, like "Eat Ice Cream for Breakfast Day" (February 2) and "Take your Dog to Work Day" (June 21). I arranged with some of my colleagues to celebrate every national holiday that exists for the entire month of April. Why? I don't think we get enough holidays! We looked at the calendar and some days are easy to celebrate, like "Walk to Work Day?" (April 5) but some of these unofficial holidays are difficult to celebrate. For example, "Fun at Work Day" was on April 1. We asked our boss for permission to play games in the office, like racing with our chairs. But this wasn't as hard as "Wear Pajamas to Work Day"—our boss didn't allow us to do that!

"Read a Road Map" day on April 5 was very educational for me because I usually use my cell Phone to check how to get to places. "This time, I needed to use a map to get to a meeting at another office. I work in New York City and the meeting was in Maryland. Fortunately, I received a map from my boss as a gift. Finally, I decided to take the day off for "Honesty Day" on April 30. it's not easy to tell the truth to your colleagues all the time. I think that one is probably very hard to celebrate!

1. When did Harry celebrate every unusual holiday? _____
2. What does Harry say about these unofficial holidays? _____
3. Which holiday did Harry's boss not allow him to celebrate? _____
4. What happened on "Read a Road Map Day"? _____
5. What happened on "Honesty Day"? _____

5. Listening: Listen to the conversation and choose True or False.

Ceci says there were too many people at the party last year.

Karen thinks that not everybody likes barbecues.

Karen says that they spent too much money last year.

They agree to only have juice and water, not soda this year,

Ceci says that they did not drink everything at the party last year.

6. Vocabulary. Use enough or not enough to complete the sentence.
