Conn is the narrator of this story. Apparently, he is a nobody because no one sees him, he doesn't have a horse and he isn't a lord or a prince or a king. However, even though no one sees him, he is everywhere and he can see everything. For example, he was there when Macbeth's face went _____ because the first _____ of the witches was true! Everybody was _____ !

Because Conn is the narrator of the story, we have been learning about Macbeth's story through his eyes and also through his ears: it was Conn who _____ a conversation between Macbeth and his wife in which they plotted against Duncan. They were _____ his hands under water to wash away the evidence and to _____ the guards. Had they killed Duncan? Or is Conn making us think they did? Let 's find out!

B. Choose a moment you liked from the story and draw it!
