

LISTENING PRACTICE: GLOBALISATION

*Fill the blanks with NO MORE THAN THREE WORDS

Man: I think that globalisation has more good sides than.....To start with, thanks to the global market, companies invest in.....which means that they create more job opportunities.

Woman: It's true, but everybody knows that the people who work for these companies are first of all exploited and then not.....

Man: But you know that every country has regulations that guarantee workers' rights. And on top of that,.....are proportional to local economies. In my opinion, what matters is that with globalisation poor countries have an.....to develop economically.

Woman: Sorry to....., but all the economic.....are for rich countries that become richer at the expense of poor countries, and their multinationals are so powerful that they control their economies. Also, I'd like to add that there's a serious disadvantage for rich countries as well, because when a company invests in.....the consequence is that there are fewer jobs in its home country.

Man: I'm afraid I.....with you. Think of the advantages that rich countries have:.....become lower, then companies sell more goods and make more money and finally there are opportunities to get to know other cultures much better.
