Making new friends—is it harder for adults?

Every year, when children go back to school, they see old friends, lose friends, and make new friends. But for adults, making new friends is not as easy. It's actually challenging. According to author and psychologist Robin Dunbar, most adults have about 150 people they know socially, but only three to five very close friends. We asked different people: "Is it hard to make new friends, and why?"

"Yes, it is. I have two or three old friends from school, but I don't have any new friends. I have a baby boy who takes up all my time now. I can't go out and do things. That's why it's not easy to make new friends." Maria, Italy

"I think it's hard. I know the guys on my soccer team. We play every week, and sometimes we go out together. I like them! But I don't think they are my close friends. Maybe the reason is that we don't talk about personal things, just sports." Emil, Czech Republic

"It's not that hard. I have six or seven very close friends, because I'm a very friendly person. I like meeting new people and socializing. I ask questions, and I show interest in the other person. I don't think it's necessary to be a very interesting or funny person—you only need to be a good listener." Magali, India

5 Read the sentences and choose the correct reason (a, b, or c).

1 Maria doesn't have any new friends because she _____.

a has a baby

b has a large family

c is a student

2 Emil doesn't have many close friends on his team because he _____.

a doesn't like the other players

b doesn't share personal things with them

c isn't interested in sports

3 Magali has several close friends because she _____.

a is a funny person

b is friendly

c is interesting
