THE FUTURE WORLD OF WORK

Since the development of the Internet, humans have slowly moved the world of work more inside. In the past, many people used to work outdoors and in factories. Nowadays, lots of people work in schools, shops and offices. The big question is "What will the world of work look like in the future?"

To begin with, there will probably be floating offices as there will be less room for new buildings on land. Secondly, more people will definitely work from home. For example, people will work online, so this will result in more job opportunities for those who want to live in their own country and work abroad. For those that work in offices, the journey to work will be different. There will be fewer cars on the road and more fast means of public transportation. Self-driving vehicles will be electric, so there will be less air pollution from fossil fuels.

Robots will play a bigger role than they have done so far. Already, we have robots in factories. However, in the future, many traditional jobs may disappear. For instance, postmen will not have to deliver large packages as drones will fly them to their destinations. However, the good news is that there will be new jobs, such as drone technicians and skybridge engineers.

For those who keep their jobs, the future might look bright. These changes will mean more free time. Perhaps in the future, there will be a 4-day or even a 3-day working week for the same salary levels. In the far future, there may come a time when we don't have to work at all. If so, what will we do then?

26. Fewer people will work in offices.
 27. People will find it easier to look for a job in a foreign nation without leaving their own country.
 28. All means of public transportation will be electric.
 29. Humans will lose more jobs to robots, which will be totally negative.
 30. The future changes might make humans work less and earn less money.

PART 4. LISTENING

Listen to a podcast about future education and write NO MORE THAN TWO WORDS.

The world of (36) _____ won't be the same in the future. To begin with, students will go to the (37) _____ where recorded lessons will be available for them. At schools, there will be both human teachers and robots. Although robots won't be able to react to the students' emotions, they'll (38) _____ them with their work. Students won't need (39) _____ anymore as they'll have e-books and hologram devices. The technology will give students real-life experiences even with (40) _____ like math. In a short word, learning is going to be more effective in the future.
