clues iceberg search shipwreck sank voyage

The Titanic hit an <sup>1</sup> iceberg on its first <sup>2</sup> voyage, in 1912.
After just over two and a half hours, it <sup>3</sup> sank to the bottom of the ocean.
Years later, underwater explorers began to <sup>4</sup> search for the <sup>5</sup> shipwreck of the Titanic. Many of the objects they found – clothes, bags, etc. – during their exploration have given them <sup>6</sup> clues about who the passengers were.

on-board harbor souvenirs deck

I'll never forget my first voyage on a passenger ship. The ship was called the Ocean Queen. We were sailing to an island for a short vacation. Once we were <sup>1</sup> on-board the crew showed us where we were going to sleep, and took us upstairs to the <sup>2</sup> deck. We stood there and watched the ship sail out of the <sup>3</sup> harbor. There was so much to do on the ship! Just before we got to the island, we went to the gift shop to buy <sup>4</sup> souvenirs. I bought a pen, with a ship inside it. When you turn the pen around, the ship begins to move!
