

ARICA

My city is called Arica, and it's in the north of the country. It isn't the biggest city in Chile, and it isn't one of the most enjoyable, but it is definitely one of the hottest. It's cheaper than a lot of other cities: probably the most expensive places are Santiago and Concepción. What Arica used to have was one of the largest amounts of immigrants of any city in the country. But now in the economic recession, there is much less immigration and some people are moving away. One of the most famous things in Arica is the "Con la fuerza del sol" carnival, held every year. Many folklore dancers and teams present their show to the city and the visitors. The celebration lasts 3 days long! It is super cool. The most visited places in the city are the beaches "La lisera" and "El laucho". The most popular fruits are mango and passion fruit. Arica is also famous for the "Chinchorro" mummies, a native culture originated in the zone thousands of years ago. You can visit them in the museums, the most interesting places to visit. We have a very tropical climate. Arica is a little bit smaller than Iquique. I think Arica is the smallest city in the north of Chile.

1. Continuing with comparatives and superlatives, this time you must identify both forms in the text that appears below. Underline them and then write them at the bottom. Continuing with comparatives and superlatives, this time you must identify both forms in the text that appears below. Underline them and then write them at the bottom.