

THE SUPER TUSKER

Watch the video and fill in the blanks...

A few of them go on to become the biggest tusked elephants to walk the earth. This is Luga, named by the rangers who monitor him. A fifty-year-old super tusked elephant, one of Kenya's national treasures. Each tusk alone weighs well over one hundred pounds. These ambassadors of the elephant world have had to endure immense challenges. Living through a succession of droughts, modern development and poaching from the illegal ivory trade. Today there are believed to be just 30 super tusked elephants remaining across Africa. And Tsavo is home to a third of them. Most are now living well into old age. National parks play a vital role in their protection.
