The History of Books

Books have been around for thousands of years. When humans developed a writing system, they write on anything from stones to tree barks. Later, paper was invented and books were made. However, books were written by hand so they were very expensive. Not many people were able to buy them. It was in the mid-15th century that German Johannes Gutenberg invented the first mechanical printing press. This allowed books to be mass-produced and sold at a cheaper price.

Have you ever wondered how books are made? Today, technology has allowed us to produce books in many sizes and shapes very quickly. First, printers print the text of a book on large sheets of paper. The paper used is sometimes as large as a newspaper page. By printing on large sheets of paper, printers are able to lower their costs.

After printing, the sheets of paper are cut into smaller pages that are twice the size of the finished book. These pages are later divided into small groups and folded in half. Later, they are sewn together. Lastly, the folded and sewn pages are cut into the actual book size and glued to the spine of the book's cover.

- 10 Why were books expensive in the past?
- A Because paper was hard to make.
 - B Because books were written by hand.
 - C Because books were printed on a machine.
- 11 Which of the following is the reason books are cheaper now?
- A Paper is cheaper
 - B The printing press
 - C A new writing system
- 12 What do printers do to reduce costs?
- A Invent cheap paper
 - B Cut paper into smaller pages
 - C Print text on large sheets of paper
- 13 Which step comes after the pages are sewn together?
- A They are folded in half.
 - B They get text printed on them.
 - C They are cut into actual book sizes.
- 14 Based on the text, we know that _____.
- A books are still expensive
 - B humans wrote on rocks in the past
 - C we can only print books in one size
