Glynn & Debbie Larcombe

Teenager Charlie Larcombe lives in an amazing home: a wooden windmill. His parents built the windmill in the pretty English village of Wraybury, basing their design (1) on a 400-year-old mill in the same area.

Inside, there are five levels. The (2) ground floor is the largest, containing the living room, dining room and kitchen. Upstairs, the first and second floors have bedrooms, a tiny office and the bathroom. The Larcombes use the (3) corners floor for storing things, and the fourth, at the top of the mill, is the part that looks

(4) like a boat and holds the sails.

Living in a windmill brings a (5) few changes to normal life. The family found the shape of their new home a little strange at first. All the rooms are round, so there are no (6) corners and the ceilings seem quite small compared to the floors.

It has central heating and it's very cosy, but fire is a danger (7) as it is made of wood. There is a water system in each ceiling, so if there is a fire, the people inside can flood every level (8) in seconds. Also, the balcony around the outside of the mill provides an escape route from the upper floors.

The Larcombes used local materials to build the windmill, including pieces from old cottages and farm buildings in the nearby area. The one last (9) job is to complete the 8-metre long sails. They hope to use wind energy to create all the (10) electricity the mill needs – and perhaps also enough for ten other houses in the village.

We often believe that living in a cave is (0) far from the distant past, the days of cavemen and cavewomen, but nowadays a (1) lot of people are buying cave homes. The climate is changing and temperatures around the world are (2) rising, but inside a cave it remains cool, even (3) in summer.

I am sitting in a cave home in Cappadocia, one of the hottest parts of Turkey, (4) at three o'clock on a July afternoon. Outside it reaches 35 degrees almost (5) all day, but in here it is only 18. It never falls much below that, even during the coldest months.

Modern cave homes like this often have a phone, satellite TV and an Internet (6) connection and they are very comfortable. (7) Also, the bedrooms are very quiet, dark and cool, people love sleeping in them. And, they say, it's easy to make more (8) space for yourself. You just dig a bigger room!
