2. Listen. Which of the people in exercise 1 is speaking?

Example: Speaker 1 - b

Many of us these days get our news online or through social media. There are many advantages of this. First, we can get news 'in real time'. Eye witnesses can post information online about an event as it happens, using their smart phones to take photos or videos. We also have 24-hour online news services which keep us constantly updated. Secondly, we can get news wherever we are using a smartphone or tablet. We can read it on the bus or the train at any time of day or night. Thirdly, we have a lot more information at our fingertips from many different sources, international as well as national. This means we have a better understanding of what is going on in the world as a whole. Reading different reports on the same news story also means we get a more balanced view of events.

On the other hand, there are also disadvantages. First, sources are not always reliable and there are many stories that are not completely true. It is sometimes difficult to know what to believe. Secondly, a lot of news shared on social media is not serious news, for example celebrity gossip. If people spend their time reading this, they have less time to spend on real news stories. Finally, the Internet has been bad for newspaper publishers because people are reading their news for free, instead of paying for newspapers. One simple truth, however, is that we are living in the Information Age, and the way we receive and give information is constantly changing.
